YALE'S SOUTHERN CLUBS FIND THRILL 'IN ALUMNI DINNER

Over 300 Gather to Sing Old Songs and Hear New and Retiring Presidents.

Yale songs and cheers boomed on the tenth floor of the Willard Hotel last night, while the banquet of the Associated Southern Yale Glee Clubs was in progress.

More than three hundred Yale men were assembled and the spirit that prevailed throughout the evening sent more than one thrill through the big dining hall. There were any number of Yale men present who have strained great prominence and affluattained great prominence and affluence. Arthur T. Hadley, president of Yale University, and Dr. James F. Hutchins of the graduating class of this year. William S. Cul-bertson, president of the Washington Alumni Association, presided. The occasion served as a fitting climax to the two days' meeting in this city of the association. The majority of those present had been received a few hours before at the White House, where they met the President and Mrs. Harding.

He called upon all Yale men to aid in the administration's efforts toward the pro-motion of Americanism. "It is for you men of Yale." he declared. "to dedicate yourselves to the advancment of this spirit of Americanization."

President Hadley Speaks.

President Hadley's address served Principally as a most eloquent tribute to the south. He spoke with great feeling and earnestness when he referred to the social and human Instinct which, he said, is so highly developed in the south. "This social instinct, this power of personal contact, is something that the country as a whole needs to learn," he said. Our national ideals are too me chanical and not personal enough. The legislative wheels will not turn again in the Senate until Tuesday, the senators observing Memorial day as a holiday. When they assemble they will proceed with the consideration of the naval appropriation bill, and, the probabilities are, will dispose of that measure soon. The contests over the navy personnel, the building program and the disarmament amendment have been ended by action, and not a great deal remains to be done with the bill in the Senate. The Army appropriation bill is waiting its turn and will be taken up probably as soon as the Navy bill is out of the way. The prin-cipal contest over this measure

A gradual improvement in busiess conditions is to be expected dur-ng the next eighteen months in the ities, but the farmer who has exhausted his savings from war-time prosperity will face a desperate sit-

These predictions were made by H. A. Wallace, son of the Secretary of Agriculture and editor of Wallace's Farmer, in an address delivered at the Raleigh Hotel yesterday afternoon before the newly formed Stable Money League.

Mr. Walizce indorsed the stable dollar plan of Prof. Irving Fisher of Yale University, who yesterday was elected a member of the executive committee of the league. He expressed he opinion it would gain the favor of the farmers.

Attack I asound Theories. Mr. Wallace, Representative Luce Massachusetts and other speakers

l emphasized the danger to the ountry of demagogues seizing upon the present situation of discontent to the present situation of discontent to popularize unsound economic theories. They commended the plan of the league to wage a campaign of education, designed to bring about the establishment of a stable currency. Robert D. Kent, president of the Merchants' Bank of Passaic, N. J., proposed the demonetization of gold, defining the dollar in terms of a composite unit of commodities chasen as standard, and making it standard, and making it exchangeable for warehoused and proportioned ag-gregates of these commodities. Prof. Fisher discussed the advantages to the banker of stabilization.
Suggestions advanced by the speakers will be considered by the execuive committee, which proposes to canvass the country's economic ills thoroughly and adopt a sound pro-gram for relief which will be advocated actively in every state.

Demonetization of Gold.

Proably the most radical suggestion that went before the league was that advanced by President Kent of the Passaic, N. J., Merchants' Bank, who was elected a vice president of the organization. This was the proposal for demonetizing gold.

It is a part of the plan to establish government warehouses and de-posit in them iron, coal, cloth, wheat, leather and similar commodities susceptible of storage without undue deterioration within a limited period.

According to Mr. Kent, there are strong movements abroad at the present time to establish such warehouses in order to take out of the hands of certain classes of middlemen the control and major profits of vital products.

The number of commodities selected should be small enough to keep opportunity to consult with the scheme simple," said the speaker "It should be large enough to guard against any violent effect upon the value of the aggregate due to a failure in the crop, such as cotton, or to crop failures in a geographical sec-tion, such as a readily imaginable case in which the south might have

> In explaining his own stable-dollar plan, Prof. Fisher said its purpose is to counteract any tendency of gold plan, Prof. Fisher said its purpose is to counteract any tendency of gold to depreciate by increasing the gold content of the dollar. "We know," he said, "such a procedure would actually work on the same principle that the price levels of Mexico and the United States are inversely proportional to the weights of the gold dollars in the two countries."
